INVESTING IN CUBAN ART:

A SUSTAINABLE, ETHICAL BUSINESS MODEL

SUPPORTING ARTISTS – CREATING VALUE

Cuba is home to a deep well of artistic talent—yet due to isolation, scarcity of materials, and political restrictions, most Cuban artists remain invisible to the global art market. A number of well-known artists are now in their 80s and 90s; their work will gain significant value over the coming years but remains under-recognized.

We are building a direct-to-collector art business that acquires original work from both emerging talents and aging masters and resells it in Mexico and beyond.

We are also working to create top-quality, authorized limited edition woodblock prints and giclees for selected artists.

OUR MODEL

- We buy directly from artists living in Cuba, paying fair and transparent prices, offering financial and emotional support in a time of crisis.
- We resell internationally via multiple channels.
- We reinvest as much of profit as possible into further art acquisitions, art supplies, and artist support.

WHY NOW

- Cuba's economic crisis is worsening; there is no viable local art market
- Elderly artists are aging rapidly.
- Younger artists continue creating in impossible conditions.
- Global interest in ethically-sourced, socially-impactful art is growing.

About the Project

The project is a curatorial and cultural initiative dedicated to identifying, supporting, and promoting exceptional contemporary Cuban artists whose work deserves greater international visibility. By building ethical, long-term relationships with artists across the island, the project creates a transparent and sustainable pathway for their work to reach collectors, galleries, and cultural institutions outside Cuba. Through careful artist selection, financial support, exhibitions, and professional representation, the initiative strengthens cross-cultural dialogue while offering collectors access to high-quality collectable artworks from a vibrant and underrepresented community.

JOIN US!

We're seeking aligned backers—collectors, small investors, or cultural allies—who believe in art as resistance, visibility, and legacy. Your contribution helps preserve a vital cultural voice while supporting real artists in real time. We accept donations of art, money, art supplies and every day necessities with gratitude.
